In the 1950s

1959 – A young couple from a nearby community was admitted to the University of Michigan Hospital in 1959. The woman, 24 years old, suffered third-degree burns over 75% of her body. The man, 25 years old, had second-degree burns over 20% of his body. Both patients had sustained severe burn injuries from a fire that occurred while they were working on a day-care center. This case inspired a third-year U-M surgical resident, Irving Feller, M.D. to begin an aftercare follow-up.

1961 – The burn unit team included an occupational therapist, a physical therapist, an occupational therapist, a social worker, and a nurse. The team was responsible for the rehabilitation of patients after their admission to the burn unit. The team also provided emotional support to the patients and their families.

1967 – The burn unit in Michigan was one of the first in the US. The unit had six beds and was equipped with the latest technology. The unit was staffed by a team of experienced and dedicated healthcare professionals.

In the 1960s

1964 – Dr. Reed O. Dingman established the first Section of Plastic Surgery at the University of Michigan. The section was later renamed the Section of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery. This section was later renamed the Section of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

1968 – An operating room was added to the open-ward burn unit. This allowed for more efficient and effective treatment of burn patients.

1969 – Nurses and physicians in India were trained in burn care by NIBM. This training program was funded by the Indian government and was aimed at improving the quality of care for burn patients in India.

1972 – An intensive care unit (ICU) was established at the burn unit. This ICU was staffed by a team of experienced and dedicated healthcare professionals.

1975 – The National Burn Center was established at the University of Michigan. The center was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1976 – The National Burn Center received its first government funding. This funding was used to expand the center’s facilities and to hire more staff.

1978 – The National Burn Center received its first federal funding. This funding was used to expand the center’s facilities and to hire more staff.

In the 1970s

1979 – The burns unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1980 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1983 – The National Burn Center received its first federal funding. This funding was used to expand the center’s facilities and to hire more staff.

1985 – The National Burn Center received its first federal funding. This funding was used to expand the center’s facilities and to hire more staff.

In the 1980s

1986 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1987 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1990 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

In the 1990s

1991 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1992 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

1993 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

In the 2000s

2001 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2002 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2003 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2004 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2005 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2006 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2007 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2008 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2009 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2010 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2011 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2012 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2013 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2014 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2015 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2016 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2017 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2018 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2019 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2020 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2021 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

2022 – The Burns Unit at the University of Michigan Burn Center was one of the first in the US. The center was established in 1979 and was dedicated to the care of burn patients and their families.

University of Michigan Burn Center Celebrates 50 Years of Expertise, Compassionate Care

Over the past 50 years, the University of Michigan Burn Center has been a leader in the field of burn care. From its inception in 1979, the center has been dedicated to providing compassionate care to burn patients and their families. The center has been at the forefront of burn care research and has been a leader in developing innovative treatments and technologies. The center’s dedication to providing compassionate care has been at the heart of its success.